

10,000 Watch Bears Defeat Cardinals, 10-0

BY HARRY MAC NAMARA.

THERE may be a football team somewhere in these United States that can and will stop the Chicago Bears in their gallop towards the National Professional Football league championship but it certainly isn't the Chicago Cardinals. The Southsiders tried to stop the march of the Northside aggregation for the second time this season yesterday but it was a rather feeble and futile attempt and the Bruins trotted off the field victorious by a 10 to 0 margin.

Approximately 10,000 spectators witnessed the contest, if, indeed, it could be called that, at Soldier Field. It was a benefit game for Rosary College and that institution profited considerably from the proceeds despite the fact that a biting cold wind kept many prospective customers away from the immediate vicinity of the lake front.

BEARS' EIGHTH STRAIGHT.

It was the eighth straight victory for the Bears and the third consecutive defeat for the Cardinals. The Bruins outclassed the Cards by a greater margin than the score indicates. Most of the play was confined to Cardinal territory and not once during the entire contest did the Southsiders threaten the Bear goal line.

The Bears had innumerable scoring chances, but the slippery condition of the field made dropkicking hazardous for Paddy Driscoll and for that reason it was a fairly interesting game to look at.

The Bears scored all of their points in the second period. Driscoll passed thirty yards to Frank Hanny from his own 45-yard line early in this session and the former Indiana captain, with a clear field in front of him, sprinted the remaining twenty-five yards to the goal line for a touchdown. Driscoll dropkicked the goal.

Following the kickoff, McDonnell got off a poor punt that went out of bounds on the Bears' 25-yard line. Senn got but six yards in three plays. On the fourth down Driscoll stepped back to the 24-yard line and, with Alf Romney holding the ball kicked a field goal from placement. That ended the scoring.

The Cardinals were hit hard by injuries during the contest. "Red" Dunn, former Marquette star, sustained a fractured ankle early in the first period when Don Murry, George Hales and Buckler hit him simultaneously as he was receiving a punt.

He was carried off the field. A little later on Ike Mahoney, former Creighton luminary, suffered a fractured finger. Mahoney remained in the game, however, after Andy Lotshaw, the Bear trainer, had administered first aid.

CARDINALS OUTCLASSED.

A fair idea of how completely the Bears outclassed their opponents is evidenced in the fact that the Bruins advanced close enough to the Southsiders' goal line for Driscoll to attempt six drop kicks, none of which were successful. Paddy had plenty of distance in most of his boots, but his direction was faulty, due to the uncertain footing.

Paddy almost booted one over from the 43-yard line in the third period, but the ball hit an upright and bounded back onto the field.
